

The Associated Press is reporting that Alabama House of Representatives tabled a resolution yesterday that would have recognized Birmingham News reporter Brett Blackledge for his winning of a Pulitzer Prize earlier this year.

According to the report, several representatives took the opportunity to openly question Blackledge's stories. Blackledge won the Prize for his reports on corruption within the state's two-year college system (the series is still ongoing).

They did however easily approve a resolution honoring native daughter Cynthia Tucker for winning a Pulitzer her commentaries published in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution and nationally syndicated. There are some that have said that the issue was Here's the story as it ran on TimesDaily.com in Florence.