

Now, tomorrow's Earth Day (officially), at least the one that everyone's familiar with (maybe)... that's another post. Anyway, there are a lot of things available to people in Birmingham tomorrow because of the observance that will help make the community a better place to live, whether financially or environmentally. One of the environmental options includes driving up to visit Vulcan atop Red Mountain and getting a free 90 second emissions test beginning at 10 a.m. Click on the link to see the rest of the scheduled testings for this year if you can't make it tomorrow. There's more...

If your car tests out fine, you're good to go with the knowledge that you're doing your part to help keep Alabama's air cleaner. If not and it's no longer under warranty; no worries - you'll get a voucher good for 80% of the cost of repairs (up to $1,000) at a certified repair center. Sounds like too good of a deal to pass up. Thank the folks at Alabama Partners for Clean Air (and check out the commercials on their site).
