

People walking at the southern end of Linn Park were quick to notice the large shower sitting across from Birmingham, Alabama's Board of Education building.

You've already missed the evening of competition, but there's apparently still time to participate in the Singin' in the Shower contest sponsored by Rheem Tankless and leave your own musical mark on this year's festival.

There are three more open mic spots being held this afternoon: 3, 4 & 5 p.m. Local judges will choose the best from six finalists, who will win a free Rheem Tankless water heater for their home. The finals will take place this evening at 8 p.m.

Area media personalities and local celebrities are supposed to compete for a trophy and bragging rights as "Birmingham's best celebrity singer".

We're just wondering how the winners would tour?

P.S. We're not giving reviews, we're just providing some information - <http://bhamterminal.com/citystages/>