

Jeremy Harper, a Birmingham, Alabama resident, is counting to one million (1,000,000) and broadcasting it live via webcam.

He's somewhere around 16,500 as of 2:15 p.m.

You may be asking why someone would do this; in Harper's case it's for a good cause.

Half of the donations being made to the site will be given to PUSH America, a 30-year old non-profit organization dedicated to making the lives of people with disabilities easier. It is associated with Pi Kappa Phi.

You can watch him as he attempts to reach his goal at <http://www.millioncount.com>.

You can also try and follow his efforts on his blog.

We happened to overhear that he is already close to exceeding the allotted bandwidth he has available to him. He is still seeking donations to help offset costs.

We'll try to keep up with him as best we can.
