

Screenshot of new Birmingham International Airport homepage.

A pending name change and a planned expansion also means an updated website for Birmingham International Airport. The change in design comes with one new feature that will make those that use the airport regularly a little happier - real-time flight tracking on the homepage allowing people to see if they'll be leaving on time and if they need to get there a little earlier to pick up folks as they arrive. And if it's not already up there, you can always look it up with their new Flightview function.