

Here's the scene at The Summit. While Birmingham is definitely not as crazy as New York is about the whole deal, there's still a significant number of people camped outside of the currently-closed Apple Store.

The store is scheduled to reopen at 6 p.m. local time to begin selling the iPhone to the waiting public. In case you don't want to deal with the traffic or the lines, the latest Apple gadget is available at area AT&T stores.

Good luck!
