

For those that already subscribe to The Terminal's main feed, visiting the site's front page and clicking on the subscribe link in the menu will now take you to a page that contains links to all available RSS feeds for the different sections of the site and allow readers to sign up to receive updates from the site via email.

[NOTE: The email subscription that you are signing up for is completely different from the email newsletter that we are planning to launch next month. Stay tuned for updates regarding that]

We figured it would be extremely helpful as we prepare to ramp up these other sections of the site that you have immediate access to them, though our Newsstand will always provide timely updates on what's going on all over The Terminal. More after the jump:

New submission form for Timetable

Some of you have already discovered the new submission form for our Timetable calendar. We think all of the bugs have been fixed. If you are still having problems submitting your events using the form, please let us know. We will be rolling out additional submission forms in the coming weeks, so any assistance you can provide us would be greatly appreciated.

Problems with the Newsstand search engine

We've been made aware of the problems with doing a search of the Newsstand (main) section of the site. We should hopefully be able to have it fixed sometime before Monday. We apologize if its been an inconvenience.

Other notes

We also wanted you to know that a new editorial had been posted over at my Birmingham. We're interested in reading your comments.

Hopefully we'll see some of you at our writers meeting this evening.
