

For those that visited the site this weekend, the post at the top of the page best summed up my thoughts about the situation involving The Bottletree and City Stages. So of course the next question was, what else to do besides asking folks to go. The answer is simple -> ask them to come out!

We're calling a Terminally Happy Hour for this Thursday, July 2 - only this time it's a Bottletree Bailout! We're asking all of you that see this (and your friends) to come out to The Bottletree whenever you can during happy hour on Thursday - we'll be getting there at around 4 p.m. - and enjoy meeting people from elsewhere in metro Birmingham while providing business for a venue that's done a lot for us.

BTW - for those who are not familiar with where The Bottletree is, it's located at 3719 3rd Avenue South.

We're getting a little help from our friends (and maybe a few more) in terms of getting the word out about this one and we hope that you can come on out and help us make as many people as possible aware of the plan.

But wait, there's more...

If you're in town on Friday (July 3), all of us are hoping that you'll visit your friendly neighborhood Bottletree for lunch!

Do one or do both - but thanks in advance for doing!
