

Late last night, Metroblogging Seattle's Dylan Wilbanks decided to post his comments about this letter published in yesterday's Birmingham News (scroll down, it's the last one) about the proposed elevated highway solution along U.S. 280. He's currently in town to care for family and applauds alternative solutions to the traffic crunch along our region's busiest road, but he does take some time to point out exactly what's going on with regards to their effort over in America's Emerald City. While he's collecting opinions over on the West Coast, we'd love to hear what you think...