

Birmingham mayor William Bell has announced - via the city's Twitter account - that he will be holding a meeting with young professionals at Urban Standard on Thursday at 12 p.m. According to the follow-up tweet posted by the city's public information office, the hope is that those in attendance will be willing to "share your ideas, concerns and vision for the future for Birmingham."

We're just happy for the folks at the popular lunchtime spot as they'll be packed on Thursday with both young professionals interested in sharing what they want for the city showing up and the regular crowd. It will be the second public meeting held by the mayor announced via Twitter since being sworn in last Tuesday.

Logo: City of Birmingham

UPDATE: We figured we'd ask you to share what you'd suggest or talk to Mayor Bell about over on Magic City Question.