

 In case you haven't been able to tell, Birminghamians truly love their beer. We're also becoming a home of some rather tasty brew with many of us supporting Good People Brewing Co. whenever possible (incidentally they've announced that their new equipment (including canning) should be here by October.

We have blog dedicated to our love of the stuff here in The Magic City (read: Beeringham). We've got an incredible annual beer tasting event that just celebrated its third year earlier this month. The metro area's even the home of Free The Hops.

So you can imagine just how easy it would be to let folks know that you're planning to open the second brewery in town in two months... very.

Avondale Brewing Company announced their existence via Facebook one week ago today; it now has nearly 1,200 fans 2:15 p.m. It was featured in The Birmingham News just three days after its Facebook debut. They've even got their own Bhamwiki listing and a few followers for their Twitter profile (though they can always use more).

They hope to be open no later than the beginning of next year. I even enjoyed using it to talk about accentuating the positives of the city late last week...

Photo: Avondale Brewing Company under construction. Courtesy of their fan page on Facebook.