

Birmingham Weekly has named a permanent replacement for former editor Glenny Brock, who left the paper earlier this year. Sam George is set to be formally introduced at the Weekly's new managing editor next month; he posted this farewell to readers of bham.fm earlier today.

Media of Birmingham has an interview with Sam on their site. George most recently served as an editor and web designer for bham.fm. Some of you may also remember Sam as one of the original contributors to this website's Timetable section.

His formal introduction in the print edition will coincide with a relaunch of the Weekly's website, possibly this Thursday. For those interested in a sneak peek, we've been able to secure a screenshot of the redesigned website.