

GiveCamp Birmingham is coming to the Magic City
January 14-16.

It's an event where area technology professionals from developers to web strategists and everyone in between donate their time and resources to provide solutions for non-profit organizations over the course of a weekend.

It will be the state's first GiveCamp. The program was founded in 2007 by Chris Koenig (who gives this great overview of the project via video). It's provided tech benefits to more than than $1 million in services to more than 150 charities in that short period of time. It'll also be one of at least fifteen events like it taking place that weekend across the country.

Registration is still open if you're interested in giving your time and talents to this cause.

Logo: Courtesy of official website.