

That's when John Lennox will debate Richard Dawkins at the Alys Stephens Center. While information has been out in public for weeks, we've noticed a recent upswing in the online buzz about the event. It's being sponsored by the Fixed Point Foundation, a Birmingham-based Christian "think-tank" organization.

Dawkins is a respected intellectual and known atheist while John Lennox is a Christian apologist and scientist. Both gentlemen work in Oxford, England; Lennox is Reader in Mathematics and Fellow in Mathematics and Philosophy of Science, Green College, University of Oxford while Dawkins is Fellow of the Royal Society and Charles Simonyi Chair for the Public Understanding of Science at Oxford University. So basically, it's going to be a good one. Click on over to Good News to learn more about the event from its original press release.

Lennox has been interviewed on WBHM - click here to listen to or read the conversation.
