

TechBirmingham President and CEO Curtis Palmer has announced that he will be stepping down from those positions effective close of business Wednesday. According to the press release, Palmer (who also contributes to The Terminal) will remain on the board of directors and still manage Ecycling Day efforts among other things.

The official announcement is over on the non-profit organization's TechBlog. For those interested in just what this change means, the organization is having a TechMixer on November 6 at the Innovation Depot. You can pick their brains then.